WHY PHOTOS ARE DECISIVE

The decision happens in 1 second

She sees your main photo for less than 1 second before she swipes. This guide will ensure those seconds work for you.

---

> Most men choose their photos based on how they think they look. The right question is: what does this photo tell about my life and who I am?

Good photos don't need to be professionally shot. What they do need: clear face, natural expression, and context that says something about who you are. Five types consistently work well.

TYPES 1–3

5 photo types that work

The protagonist photo

- Slight smile or neutral expression — no posed grin
- Natural light (outside, near a window) — never flash
- Simple background that doesn't distract
- Upper body, not just a face crop

TYPE 2

Activity in context

You doing something you actually do. Not posing — actually engaged. This photo says "this is who I am."

- Natural action — sport, cooking, creating, traveling
- Face doesn't need to be perfectly visible — the action tells the story
- Real context (not a studio, not a gym selfie)

TYPE 3

Social proof

You among people. Not posed, but a natural social scene where you're clearly comfortable.

- You're clearly visible among a group — not lost in it
- Natural laugh or interaction — not forced smile at the camera
- Context suggests what the event was (concert, trip, party)
- Avoid photos with another man next to you who might be more attractive

TYPES 4–5

The finishing touches

The "world" photo

A photo from a specific place, event or moment that creates curiosity. She wants to ask "where is this?"

- An unusual or interesting location
- Ideally with you in it — even if small in the frame
- The photo tells a story without words

TYPE 5

Relaxed, informal

Balances the more "serious" photos. Shows you have a normal, comfortable side. Often a photo taken by someone else without you noticing.

- A casual situation — a cafe, at home, on a walk
- Natural light and spontaneous composition
- Not overly dressed — comfortable in your own skin

> Optimal order: Type 1 (protagonist) → Type 2 or 5 (activity/informal) → Type 3 (social proof) → Type 4 (world). The main photo must always be Type 1.

WHAT KILLS PROFILES

3 photo types that destroy a profile

The bathroom/gym mirror selfie

An arm extended toward a phone in front of a mirror says: "I have no one to take a photo of me." It signals social isolation and low self-confidence. Even a well-lit gym selfie remains weak as a main photo.

Replace with: Ask a friend to take 20 photos of you somewhere in the city. Cost: zero. Impact: significant.

KILLER 2

The group photo where you're not clear

If she can't tell which person you are in 2 seconds — you've lost. Especially as a main photo. Even in secondary photos: you should be clearly recognizable.

Replace with: If you want a group photo, make sure you're clearly identifiable — by position, clothing, or cropping.

KILLER 3

Photos with an ex or "mystery woman"

A woman in the photo raises questions and distrust. Even if it's a sister or colleague — she doesn't know that. The signal is: uncertainty.

Replace with: If you want a social photo with women in it, make sure you're clearly the center and context is a group event, not a couple situation.

PRACTICAL GUIDE

How to get 5 good photos in one afternoon

1. CHOOSE A LOCATION WITH CHARACTER

   Street, park, a cafe you like, an interesting building. Avoid sterile backgrounds. The location says something about your taste.

2. BRING A FRIEND WITH A PHONE

   Two hours of real movement — walk, coffee, talk. They take photos during that. You don't have to pose — just act natural. This is where the best photos come from.

3. GOLDEN HOUR — ONE HOUR AFTER SUNRISE OR BEFORE SUNSET

   Natural warm light that works on everyone. No flash, no harsh shadows. If you can't manage golden hour — cloudy midday is the second best option.

4. SHOOT 100 PHOTOS, PICK 5

   Most photos won't work. That's normal. Out of 100 shots you'll have 10 candidates — from those you pick 5 for your profile. Don't settle for "good enough."

5. MINIMAL EDITING: LIGHT, CONTRAST, ZERO FILTERS

   Adjust brightness and contrast slightly. Crop to remove distracting edges. But: no heavy filters, no skin smoothing, no dramatic color changes. She'll see the difference when you meet.
