Profile Analysis

How to read the best profiles around you — and learn from them without copying

SECRET BONUS

The best profiles around you are a free textbook

Anyone who gets a lot of matches is doing something systematically right. This guide will teach you to see what that is and learn from it.

> You don't want to copy a profile. You want to understand WHY it works — and transfer that principle to your own situation.

Why competitive analysis works

The best profiles in your segment (age, city, type of man) are tested in practice. You don't have to guess what works — you can see it directly. But: copying a profile doesn't work — because she'll sense you're not authentic. Analysis works because you're taking the principle, not the form.

Where to find the best profiles to analyze

- ✓ Tinder: "Who likes me" — if women are liking you, they probably have active profiles you can look at
- ✓ Instagram: local community hashtags — #YourCity, #fitness[city] — active men with good profiles are visible
- ✓ Your social circle — who among your friends gets a lot of attention? What are they doing differently?
- ✓ Badoo: "Favorites" — profiles that get a lot of favorites are selective

METHODOLOGY

5-signal audit: how to read a profile systematically

For every profile you analyze, go through these 5 dimensions — each one will tell you exactly what it's doing right.

Signal 1

Visual consistency

> SCENE
> Question: Do all the photos look like they're from one person, or is it a random collection?

Consistent profiles have a similar aesthetic, color palette, or type of scene. They don't need to be professionally shot — but the photos convey one personality, not different versions.

What you're looking for: color palette (warm vs. cool), types of scenes (urban / nature / interior), level of formality in clothing.

Signal 2

Identity — what it says about who he is

> SCENE
> Question: After 10 seconds of looking at the profile — do you know who this person is and what interests them?

Strong profiles communicate a clear identity without directly stating it. You know it from the photos and bio — not from what they say about themselves.

What you're looking for: a specific interest or activity visible in the photos, a bio that says character, not a list.

Signal 3

Social proof — how he's surrounded by people

> SCENE
> Question: Do I see him with other people? Are they genuine relationships or posing?

Strong profiles show natural social engagement. The people around him are laughing or in motion — not posing.

Signal 4

Bio — one specific detail

> SCENE
> Question: Is there one thing in the bio I could actually respond to?

The best bios have at least one specific, unusual, or funny detail that opens a conversation. Identify it — and think about what your equivalent would be.

Signal 5

Energy — attractive or repulsive?

> SCENE
> Question: After looking at the profile, do you want to know more, or is it indifferent?

The roughest test: overall feeling. Strong profiles create curiosity — not "he's fine." What specifically causes that?

APPLICATION

Your Profile DNA document

After analyzing 5–7 of the best profiles in your segment, you'll compile a document — not for copying, but for inspiration.

How to build your Profile DNA document

1 SELECT 5–7 PROFILES TO ANALYZE

> Look for men of similar age and lifestyle to yours — but who are clearly active or successful on the given platforms.

2 FOR EACH PROFILE: GO THROUGH 5 SIGNALS

> Write down: what specifically does it do well in each dimension. One sentence per signal is enough.

3 FIND COMMON PATTERNS

> What repeats across multiple profiles? These patterns are tested principles — not coincidence.

4 TRANSLATE PATTERNS TO YOUR SITUATION

> Pattern: "All strong profiles have one photo in nature." Your version: where in your life do you have natural outdoor contexts?

A/B testing your own profile

Tinder Boost (or equivalent) gives you ~30 minutes of increased visibility. How to use it for testing:

- ✓ Week 1: Run Boost with your current profile — record number of matches
- ✓ Change ONE thing (main photo or bio)
- ✓ Week 2: Run Boost — record number of matches

✓ Which version gave better results? Continue with it and test further.

✕ TESTING RULE

Always change only one variable. If you change both photo and bio at once, you won't know what caused the improvement or decline. One element, one test, one conclusion.

NEXT STEP

Profile is the foundation. Now it's about the words.

A strong profile opens doors. What happens behind those doors — first messages, conversation, escalation — that's in The Language of Magnets and the other materials in the system.
